1. The Berlin office of the Main Administration for Industrial Requirements,¹ located on the third floor of the House of the Ministries in East Berlin, now has 26 staff technicians. The total personnel strength of the office, including typists and auxiliary personnel, is now about 70. The head of the office, Freissler (fmu), had been head of the former Berlin office of the 18th Main Administration for Transport-Machine Construction (HV 18) and an adviser to the former Minister for Transport and Agricultural Machine Construction, Berndt Weinberger. 25X1
2. The present work of the Berlin office is concentrated in:
 - a. Supervising the implementation of urgent government orders for material to be delivered to the Main Administration for Industrial Requirements. The office is responsible in particular for the control of deliveries of machinery, tools, and electrical equipment.
 - b. Maintaining close liaison with the chief expeditors of all main administrations in the ministry so that any problems occurring in the delivery of the needed material and equipment can be promptly solved through the combined action of the chief expeditors and the Berlin office of the Main Administration for Industrial Requirements.
